Indian Relics Featured In Anthropology Museum

Few students know there is a Carnegie Hall, even a Museum of Anthropology on campus, unless they accidentally get into the wrong

And then, as Dr. Frank Essene, head of the Department of Anthropology, puts it, "Some stay and learn, but most get out just as fast as they can."

The museum is not just a display of Indian relics; it serves primarily as a center for research of the story of Kentucky Indians and how they lived.

Each summer, staff members make field trips to various parts of the state to bring back materials for the museum.

Student workers, under this plan, have a chance to learn more about their profession doing field work. Many have excavated materials throughout Kentucky and some are involved in private projects.

Second, the museum preserves historical materials, both analyzed and unanalyzed, for the future use of students and archeologists. Third, through exhibits, it reveals sets of ideas about various topics in anthropology.

When John Hulse was a senior at the U. of South Dakota, he had his own set of "do's" and "don'ts." Don't become a mere cipher on somebody's payroll. Don't sit on the shelf waiting for your first taste of responsibility. Do get a job where you have a chance to show your stuff right from the start. Do the job.

John knew his B.S. in Business Administration could lead him into almost any field. He chose the telephone business and joined Northwestern Bell.

One of his first assignments: streamlining operating procedures for the telephone offices of Iowa's five largest cities. In this work John showed good judgment and sound organizing ability.

Today he is Telephone Manager of Sioux City, Iowa.

Besides managing day-to-day operations. helping plan tomorrow's telephone growth is an important part of John's job. A typical example is the work he does with the Sioux City Industrial Development Association. In this role. he's the answer man on projecting, planning and supplying the communications needs of new industry. He's shown above with Bob Sweeney. manager of the Sioux City Chamber of Commerce.

"You must always be thinking of the future in this business," John says. "We have to stay ahead. I think a man who has something to offer this outfit won't have a minute's worry about what it can do for him."

Well Informed Public

Whether the citizens of Kentucky vote in November to authorize or deny a limited constitutional convention, newspapermen, civic, business, and education leaders have determined that the outcome will not be the decision of an uninformed public.

Rarely does a day pass that the state's leading newspapers do not devote some space to news coverage and editorial comment on the proposed constitutional convention.

History and government students throughout the commonwealth's school system are discussing the proposal every day in their classes. Groups all over the state feature speakers who discuss the pros and cons of the referendum.

The major opposition to the convention arises from the fear of a people in a democracy that someone will interfere with their basic rights. But the newspapers have, and will, repeatedly emphasize that if the voters accept the constitutional revisions, the convention will deal with 12 specific subjects. Under the provisions of the referendum the people's rights cannot and will not be tampered with in any way.

Those opposing the convention argue that the system used to amend our national constitution is sufficient for the state's needs.

Government-conscious e ditors and civic groups reply that amending the state's constitution by offering two amendments every two years is much too slow to keep pace with Kentucky's rapidly expanding facilities. They feel it will take too long to amend every clause requiring improvement if we are to keep pace with other states which rate above Kentucky in nearly every field—education, industry, and judicial procedure.

The major changes lie in improving the judiciary system and removing the present salary limitations on public officials in positions of trust and responsibility, doctors in state institutions, city managers of second-class cities, and school superintendents of large districts.

There is no excuse nor are there any reasons why every UK student should not know what the convention question involves. It is the responsibility of the citizens of Kentucky to accept the facts and the information objectively and to discuss and weigh them critically and analytically.

Then the decision, regardless of the vote's outcome, will be that of an informed citizenry and not the folly exhibited in similar votes in the past.

Was That You?

Was that you? A friend of ours saw a heavily laden student dashing across campus the other day. He was late for class and was almost running when a bewildered freshman stopped him and asked for some information. He stopped and carefully directed the freshman to the desired destination.

Later another friend saw a student crossing campus when he spied a litter of paper near a trash barrel. The student halted, knelt, and picked up the scrap and placed it in the barrel.

Cleaning Up Bills

Japan has started issuing what the American news services, always eager to assist headline writers call "washable money." Apparently it is paper currency coated with moisture and dirt-resistant surface.

In any case, we're all for it. One of the big gaps in this drip-dry age has been pocket money. Every time we watch one of those commercials where a grown man purposely goes strolling in a downpour only to emerge smiling and immaculately creased, we fall to wondering what will happen to his smile when he reaches into his pocket to tip the headwaiter and pulls out a mass of soggy green pulp.

Some users of money will doubtless object to coated bills. The idea does sound rather related to the general plot to chromeplate the world. Still later we learned of a smiling young man who helped a coed retrieve a number of scattered books that had slipped from her grasp.

We have never seen him; our description of him is rather sketchy. He is a kind young man who always seems to have the time to do a favor for another. He is busy for he is always hurrying, yet he has time for a smile and kind word as he goes about his way.

Was that you? If so, you're a pretty nice person. We'd like to get to know you.

It appears to open the door to cellophane bank checks and nylon pennies. But actually clean bills would be worth the risk. Certainly a slight sheen would be more acceptable than the patina of grime that so often dims the visage of George Washington or Queen Elizabeth, and somehow weakens one's enthuiasm for thrift.

Besides, washable money presumably will have been treated to prevent shrinkage.

Research No Danger

By DR. MALCOLM E. JEWELL

The Kernel's editorial of Oct. 5, "The Research Mania," reflects a critical attitude toward research at this university that the Kernel has stated in the past and that is probably shared by many students on the campus. I believe it should be answered because it represents a serious misunderstanding of the purpose of a university. I recognize the attitude of students toward professors who are absorbed in research; I can recall feeling the same way when I was in college.

It should not be necessary to explain the importance of research. It is the source of all the knowledge available in textbooks or in the lecture halls. It may not be so obvious that teachers at a university such as this have a special responsibility to carry out research. Teachers at other colleges in the state are limited in their research opportunities by heavy teaching loads and less adequate library and laboratory facilities. Studies of government, history or economics, for example, that are particularly related to Kentucky may not be done at all unless they are done here.

Moreover, this is the principal center for graduate training in the state—an increasingly important responsibility for the University. One of the most valuable forms of graduate training assistance in the research being carried on by University professors. In short, it is ridiculous to warn that the University is in danger of becoming a "research school" and is receiving too many research grants. The University has no other choice if it is to serve the people of Kentucky.

Another point seldom understood by students is that research and teaching are independent. I think most teachers have found, as I have, that they can make their courses more interesting and valuable when it is possible to use illustrations drawn directly from their research work. The professor who is constantly exploring his field for more information and insight has more to offer his classes than one who reports exclusively on the findings of others. This is particularly important when there are graduate students in the classes.

The students have a legitimate and more important grievance only when the teacher's concentration on research does not leave enough time for his students and his course work. This happens less often on this campus than at most universities I know, but it remains a problem. There are several avenues toward a solution. Some few academic persons are good research men but are simply not good teachers. In a growing university it should be possible to assign such people primarily to research work and the supervision of graduate students' research. It is likewise important that promotion policies reflect equal recognition of teaching and research. You are right that the teacher must not become an "object of ridicule or scorn."

Most important, as more money becomes available for higher education, course loads and sabbatical leave must be adjusted to permit the professor to do a significant amount of research without interfering with his teaching responsibilities. Research grants are not the villains that you suggest; these and funds for increased staffs enable the University to perform both its functions better.

The Readers' Forum

Wants Togetherness

To The Editor:

Do you know what happens to a University coed when she accepts a date to a football game with a non-student man? When they get to the game she is likely to sit through the whole thing alone. Why? Because there is a rule.

What are the results of such a rule? The most disastrous possibility is that the first time your date encounters this situation he may leave in a huff, after having been told by the individual who sold him his ticket (to another section) and by an official at the gate, and by sundry officials at Sections E, D, C, and B that he can sit with you, only to run headlong into the official at Section A where both of you are to be admitted, and to learn that he cannot go in just then, that he will have to wait for an announcement granting him legal and ordained entry to the student sanctuary, and that your combined eforfts to get there 45 minutes early to occupy good seats have been in vain.

But let us suppose he waits and tells you to go in and find the best seats available. You realize he might never find you, so you sit by the entrance to the ramp in Section A (advantageously located near the 10-yard line). As the players line up on the field for the kickoff, an announcement comes over the loud-speaker: "Dates of UK students may now sit in the student section."

You watch the kickoff, then search for your date. This continues for a minimum of five minutes, until he finally appears. He may not speak to you the first half, but at least there is someone to sit beside.

I object to this unreasonable rule. If I am the only one bothered by it, then I think the University should make an exception for me. However, if there are others in the same predicament, why not set aside a small block of tickets for the UK students with non-student dates? I really don't care in which section I sit, but I am a firm believer in a "togetherness policy."

Students Praise, Criticize Kennedy Talk

RUTH EARLY

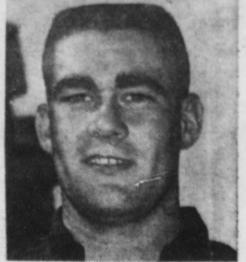

FRED HAAS

LOUISE HUSS

RON GRIMM

Immediately after Sen. John F. Kennedy's speech Saturday morning in front of the Administration Building, a Kernel reporter-photographer team interviewed five students to learn their reactions to the senator's talk.

The first interviewee was Republican Ruth Early, sophomore education major from Nashville.

"I thought Kennedy did well in that he brought up points about agriculture," said Miss Early, "but he avoided all the major issues except, of course, the farm program.

"I don't think he got a good reception when he went up on the speaker's platform," she added.

A Democrat, Gary Myers, freshman majoring in business administration, said, "I was favorably impressed by Kennedy's speech. "He stressed support of civil rights, but I think it was for the sake of making a good appearance here. He wouldn't do it in my home town (Knoxville, Tenn.).

"He's a good speaker; he moved the crowd with his speech."

Commenting on Kennedy's looks, Myers said, "His appearance is plain . . . hair messy . . . looks like he needs to use Vitalis or something."

Another Republican, Fred Haas, senior commerce major from Ft. Thomas, commented, "Kennedy gave a good speech. He made good criticisms of the things he's against. However, he didn't tell how he is going to improve them.

"He mentioned some of the major issues but he didn't pinpoint

"He looked like I expected him to."

Straying momentarily from direct comment on the speech, Haas added, "I think it was a bad mistake on the part of the faculty to hold classes during his speech."

Kennedy's campus campaigning won at least one new supporter-

The freshman psychology major from Cincinnati said, "I was an independent, but I'm for Kennedy now. I'm really more against Nixon than actually for Kennedy.

"Kennedy made a very good speech and hit many of the major issues. Of course, he didn't have time to hit all of them, I liked the way he pointed out how the Republicans have neglected world affairs.

"I wasn't disappointed in Kennedy's looks; he looks like he does in his pictures."

The Democratic presidential nominee may have gotten another student vote, depending on how Ron Grimm, junior prelaw student, makes up his mind.

After hearing the senator's speech, the Independent from Alex-"I think more of Kennedy now than I did before. I was strictly for Nixon before I heard Kennedy speak.

"Now I might think more about both of them before I vote.

"Kennedy's speech influenced me because he said we need a change and that the Democrats will give it to us. He knocked the Republican's policy of leaving things as they are and not changing.

"Kennedy looked like I expected him to-I think he'll get all the girls' votes," concluded Grimm.

HOW ABOUT A BOY COAT, GIRLS?

The extent of their intrinsic importance to you may be difficult to assess; but we think that . . . by sunlight or moonlight they are terribly chic. This Milium lined coat has the belt in the back, ocean pearl buttons, and is made of "Deep Fleece" in Camel and navy. One other thingit is moth proofed—can you believe it? Do come in and try it on!

Wildcats Blast Ou Easy Win

By SCOTTIE HELT

Predicted rain failed to materialize at Stoll Field Saturday night, but lightning did strike swiftly and often as the first quarter, two each in the a victory hungry band of Wildcats knocked the thunder out of outclassed Marshall, 55-0.

It took the Wildcats only three plays to insure their first win of the season and set into momentum a torrid pace that led to the biggest scoring outburst in nine years.

Not since All-America Quarter-crossed the goal line.

A total of eight touchdowns were scored in the rout-three in in the last quarter.

Coach Blanton Collier allowed 42 men to see action. He even dipped down into fourth and fifth team ranks in an effort to hold down the score.

Not only did Collier please his a chance to play, but he delighted the crowd by allowing all his top quarterbacks to perform.

72-13 rout of Tennessee Tech in favorite Jerry Woolum. Jerry 1951 have so many Wildcats Eisaman, senior co-captain who had not played since the Georgia Tech game, directed four scoring Fearing that predicted rain second and third quarters and one might later hamper control of the ball, Collier directed his team to take to the air early.

> The first three tallies came via the air lanes. Passes accounted for five TD's in all.

The game's opening touchdown came on a 25-yard throw from Rodgers to End Don Nuerge, and team by giving all able bodies the second on a 48-yard screen pass from Rodgers to Calvin Bird.

Woolum passed seven yards to Tom Hutchnison for the third Starter Tom Rodgers led two score. Three conversions by back Babe Parilli engineered a scoring drives, as did sophomore Clarkie Mayfield gave the Cats a 21-0 lead at the quarter.

> Jim Reader's 19-yard run and a 12-yard Eisaman-to-Max Walton pass accounted for the two second quarter scores.

> Third quarter, touchdowns came on the ground, but were set up by key pass completions.

Fullback Jimmy Poynter broke loose for a 37-yard scoring run and Halfback Bill Ransdell ran seven yards into the end zone.

The night's final score came on Oct. 21-Notre Dame Invitational a 14-yard pass from Eisaman to Hutchinson midway through the final period. Gary Coehran's 52yard run set up the score.

> The Cats wound up with a 480-104 advantage in net yardage. The Cats recorded 242 passing yards hitting on 16 of 26 passes. They added 238 yards on ine ground.

Wildcat End Dickie Mueller maneuvers behind Marshall halfback Millard Fleming and adds another UK passing gain. The Big Green pass defense proved vulnerable as the Cats connected on 16 of 26 passes for 242 yards.

While football is still at its brightest in the national spotlight, "King" basketball lingers just around the corner.

The opening game for the 1960-61 Wildcats of Baron Adolph Rupp is not until Dec. 1 against VMI, but practice ing loss to beat the Fijis 13-0 last game, but time ran out with the or coached at Kentucky before begins this Saturday-Oct. 15.

The Cats have been excluded from the Southeastern Conference throne room for two straight years now and held out of NCAA play for a year, and Rupp is making no secrets of the fact that this unusual situation is making him restless to regain lost prestige.

So, the opening drill Saturday should see the boys get down to rough work immediately.

And speaking of the boys-the Baron has a real crop this year. Counting only five personnel losses from last year's team, Rupp lists 17 players on the current roster.

Forecasters list junior college transfers Vince Del Negro and Doug Pendygraft as men to watch while Bill Lickert, hampered by injuries last season, again is being mentioned in All-America selec-

New faces from the 1969-61 Kittens are George Atkins, Scotty Baesler, Bernie Butts and Pat Doyle.

Preceding the opening practice date will be a press-radio-TV picture session Friday.

Rather ironically, the 1960-61 Official NCAA Basketball Guide rates Kentucky as a sure bet for national prominence, but just another contender in the SEC.

burgh again today and the Pirates whipped the New York Yankees. Bob Rule, Houston Press sports 5-2, for a 3-2 lead in the World editor says, "Adolph Rupp is expected to have Kentucky back on top in the Southeast, and the the win while Art Ditmar was the Baron's ball clubs always contend strongly on a national level." loser for the Yanks.

Lee Baker, Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, is not as complimentary. An excerpt from his SEC preview:

"Kentucky's Wildcats, South- ley is expected to oppose Pittseastern Conference champions 19 burgh's Bob Friend. times, now have failed in two successive seasons to round out their title total at 20.

"The ever increasing over-all strength of the conference is reflected graphically by that second setback for the Cats, since it marks the first time in the SEC's 28 years this has happened to Kentucky.

"And 1960-61 promises Baron Adolph Rupp and his Bluegrass legions nothing better than to be a part of the pack in the mad scramble for the top spot.

"Certainly Kentucky ranks as a favorite but so do several others, most notably the defending champ, Auburn, and the runnerup, Georgia Tech, plus the likes of Vanderbilt, Tulane and Tennessee, all of whom rate at least dark horse consideration."

They still hate us in the SEC, don't they?

Parsons Picked

Dick Parsons, versatile athlete from Harlan, has been elected captain of the 1961 UK baseball team.

Already captain-elect for the 1960-61 Wildcat basketball squad, Parsons is believed to be the first athlete ever to captain two major UK teams in the same year.

Parsons was an All-SEC baseball pick in 1959 and an All-NCAA regional selection last year.

Among subjects discussed were the possibility of giving freshman male students big sisters to aid them in adjusting to campus social life, making ROTC voluntary, revising the grading system so that emphasis is not placed on grades, and organizing the independents in order to get more participation in campus activity.

It was pointed out by Anne Shaver, chairman of the conference, that only five percent of those present were independents.
